DETAILED ACTION

1. This Office Action is the answer to the Amendment filed on October 12, 2006, which paper has been placed of record in the file.
2. Claims 1-5, 8, 11-18, 21, and 24-27 are pending in this application.

Examiner's Amendment

3. An examiner's amendment to the record appears below. Should the changes and/or additions be unacceptable to applicant, an amendment may be filed as provided by 37 CFR 1.312. To ensure consideration of such an amendment, it MUST be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee.

Authorization for this examiner's amendment was given in the interview with Mr. Pascale Hair on December 6, 2006.

Claims 28 and 29 are canceled.

Allowable Subject Matter/Reasons for Allowance

4. Claims 1 and 14 are allowed over the prior arts cited records.

The closets prior arts are:

1) Shigenaga (US 4,710,613) discloses an identification system wherein validity between a first unit and a second unit is identified when the first unit is electrically communicated with the second unit. The first unit includes a generator for generating identification code information, a calculator for calculating, based upon the identification code information, an estimation time required for processing the identification code information in the second unit, a time counter for measuring an actual time required for completely processing the identification code information in the second unit, and an unit for identifying validity between said first and second units by comparing the actual processing time to the estimation processing time. The second unit includes at least a processor for processing the identification code information sent from the first unit.

2) Lee (US 5,923,759) discloses a system for controlling requests from portable electronic cards of differing in-card electronic processing capabilities, and including a central processing module, associated memory, and an operating system, comprising a plurality of card units into which data cards and cards having internal data processing may be inserted; security module means for authenticating cards inserted into the plurality of card units and for securely exchanging data with the authenticated cards; and means, separate from the security module means, for processing data received from the security module in accordance with an application program.

Therefore, it is clear from the description of Shigenaga's and Lee's inventions that the prior arts do not considered the possibility of: providing a printer containing a trusted authentication chip and a printer consumable containing an untrusted authentication chip; applying, in the untrusted authentication chip, an asymmetric encrypt function to the second decrypted outcome together with an original data message read from the untrusted authentication chip using the second secret key to produce a first encrypted outcome; passing the second encrypted outcome together with the original data message to the trusted authentication chip; decrypting, in the trusted authentication chip, the second encrypted outcome with an asymmetric decrypt function using the first key to produce a decrypted random number and a decrypted data message, as included in claim 1; a printer containing a trusted authentication chip, a printer consumable containing an untrusted authentication chip; the read function applies the symmetric encrypt function to the first decrypted outcome together with an original data message read using the second secret key to produce a second encrypted outcome, also retuning the second encrypt outcome together with the original data message; the test function operating to decrypt the second encrypt outcome using the first key to produce a decrypted random number and a decrypted data message without knowledge of the second secret key, as included in claim 14.

5. Claims (2-5, 8, 11-13) and (15-18, 21, 24-27), are allowed because they are dependent claims of the allowable independents 1 and 14 above, in that order.

Conclusion

6. Claims 1-5, 8, 11-18, 21, and 24-27 are allowable.
